St. Louis, Mo., July 6 .- Four of the six favorites were successful at the Fair Grounds this afternoon, the outsiders being Wild West, at 12 to 1, and Juanita, at 7. So Much High Class Racing stakes for their Fall meeting, which begins October 13 and ends November 3. The former was proted by a jockey of obscure identity. Wilhite, a stable boy, and Junnita was also ridden by N. Turner, an exercise lad. The character of the jockeys materially influenced the odds of their respective mounts. This was the first day of Prices on the Whole Excellent, but the Summer meeting of the St. Louis Jockey Club, and the purses were reduced to $300, except in two races, in which they faith, stick to your rule. You will be better off than if you listen to the idle "tips" and rumors that float about the

This season public form has certainly been amazingly deceptive. Cases of first to-day and last to-morrow have been of frequent occurrence. Horses that find a journey of six furiougs too long one day, have won over a "route" the next time out. "Feather" weights have appeared to anchor a horse who in some previous race had carried his full impost with ease. Jockeys have been great riders one day, and worse than novices the next. The oldest turf patrons have agreed that never within their recollection have cases of inand-out form on the part of both horses and riders been more frequent. Yet with all this to argue against form, I still claim that the majority of bettors would have been richer had they gone through the storms true to their standard.

An excellent proof of this is the success of the average newspaper tipster. They of course go astray at times, but a glance over the records will show that a day seldom passes without their naming at least one winner, while an average of a season will show a percentage of from 40 to 50 per cent.

Can the same be said of calculations This season public form has certainly Milwaukee, July 6 .- The race of the day

This is not the experience of the general ublic alone, but of the shrewdest men in the business. Owners, trainers, booknakers and plungers have the same tale to tell.
